Cause Camp conference celebrates 22 years of nonprofit education and networking

GRAND RAPIDS, MI – Now in its 22nd year, Cause Camp is a top-rated nonprofit conference that provides actionable education on the most requested topics, including fundraising, marketing, board relations, and more. Attendees from across the nation can attend virtually on October 19th-20th, 2023.

The two-day conference encompasses the theme of lessons in momentum, characteristic of the roller coaster of nonprofit life. Every nonprofit must navigate twists and turns and overcome the highs and lows of propelling its mission forward.

"Cause Camp is a nonprofit legacy. It's a place where the nonprofit professional, new and seasoned, disconnects from all of the monotony of daily tasks and reconnects with the novelty of a shared experience in a getaway destination", Delaney Mullennix, Executive Director of Nonprofit Hub, continues, "My biggest takeaway? Cause Camp was one of the greatest relationship builders of my professional career".

The renowned conference will feature speakers with in-depth knowledge of the nonprofit sector. Speakers include Jacob Brown, known for his motivational talks on taking failure and turning it into fuel; Kim Fuller, CEO of Phil, Inc., who is known to be big-hearted and sunny about philanthropic communications and positive change; and Ben Smithee, known for his role in developing marketing strategies for nonprofits.

Cause Camp 2023 will provide ample time for attendees to network with their nonprofit peers from across the nation and experience the watch party with dedicated time for live Q&A with every speaker.
